You have effectively gone off the grid, missed every Skype call for a week, and stopped responding to emails.

Imagine how you would feel if this situation was reversed.

I want to know where Max is and where he has been since Saturday. I want to know if there will be Skype tonight. I want to know if the hand off is going to occur tomorrow.

What you are doing is beyond words...

After much thought, I have taken a leave of absence from work until the end of August and have traveled with Maximus to Japan to visit my cancer-stricken mother. The torment I have endured in recent years have left me (and therefore Max) emotionally ruined and have forced my hands to take this step that I wish I did not have to take. We are in Osaka with our family where you visited before, and I just need little time to have my and Max's wound to be healed through the love of my family. Skype calls with Max can be resumed this weekend, if you'd wish, as I have never wanted to deprive you of time with Max. It is ironic for you to suggest that I should put myself in your shoes as you have never put yourselves in my shoes.

Please arrange for me to have Skype with Max on Saturday and Sunday -- I would prefer 8am PST or 8pm PST.

Are you going to let me know when I can have Skype?

I have not heard from you regarding Skype. It is now Sunday evening. What is going on?
